SPECIAL DISPATCH TO THE OREGONIAN.

Sporting Sheeps Fooled.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 7.—A Cleveland Special gives an amusing story of the owners of a horse said to be entered there yesterday. "I'll show you the fastest horse," said Richard, owner of the "dollar horse," to Mr. Louis, at the race track. "I'll bet you $5,000 on him." Louis, at the race track. "I'll bet you $5,000 on him." Louis, at the race track. "I'll bet you $5,000 on him."

MITCHELL AS A POLITICIAN AGAIN

At the time J. H. Mitchell was defrauding the republicans of Portland, referred to here-to-day, Dr. Wilson Bowlby, one of the leaders of the republican party in Oregon was the cashier of the people's fire company. The night his frauds in this city, Mitchell had secured a delegation in the state convention as well as in the legislature, ready to do his bidding. Among them was W. W. Upton, a shrewd political wireworker from Sacramento, who furnished most of the brains for the ring. After the job had been fixed in Multnomah, the schemers turned their attention to other counties, and made a bargain with a few corrupt men at Salem, whose object was to defeat Dr. Bowlby, bring out a new candidate for congress and secure a legislative ticket from Marion county that would support Mitchell for senator. It was part of the plan to defeat Marion F. Mulkey for prosecuting attorney in the interest of a young man of disreputable character and habits.

The convention was held at Corvallis, and the early nomination of Mr. Mulkey for district attorney showed that by fair management the corrupt bargain for the defeat of Dr. Bowlby could not be carried out. Then was Mitchell's native dishonesty, aided by his imported California associate, brought into play. It was represented to delegates from other counties that it was not desired to defeat Bowlby, but to give their favorite one complimentary vote. Mitchell went to Dr. Bowlby in person, took him out to one corner of the church in which the convention was held, and told him not to fear a defeat or work for his nomination, that the Multnomah delegation would all go for him. So he and his friends rested quietly, supposing that Mitchell's positive word was good. But on the first ballot the "complimentary dodge," and the vote of the Multnomah delegation solid, caused the defeat of Dr. Bowlby. This was not only a defeat of Dr. Bowlby, but a disappointment to the party. Those familiar with the public sentiment of the county at that time say positively that Dr. Bowlby was the choice of the people. And the result was a wrong to both, which they pocketed, and elected the ticket.

The republican party was thoroughly established on its principles and strong in its majority of over three thousand, when this job was set up by Mitchell. It was the beginning of an end yet to come, which we have reason to hope is near. Throughout many years the party has endured this man and his operations, but will do it no longer. Four years ago, when his candidacy was known, the people elected a democratic legislature, and except that his plans were concealed, would have done so again this year. Contrast the vote for Hon. M. C. George, who was and is believed to be free from alliance with bossism, with the vote four years ago when a republican legislature meant Mitchell's election to the senate.

Is it not time that the old republicans, who know these things to be true, should unite with the vigorous rising young element, who do not want to take passage on a sinking ship in rebuking such practices, and above all the man that first introduced them into this state? People, whose interests ought not to be ignored, want for senator an able, honest man, whose political record, private and public life, would not be a disgrace to the state and to which a father could point with pride as a model for his son. J. H. Mitchell is not such a man. We could name a score of men who would make able, honorable and useful senators, men who would do Oregon credit and not disgrace her. We have no candidate, but we hope such a man will be elected.

AN ABSURD STATEMENT.

A rich vein of humor pervades the statement of Simon Cameron that the supporters of the Independent revolt in Pennsylvania are instigated by a desire for the triumph of free trade and the fall of protection. As THE OREGONIAN is included in the roll of honor of the anti-bossism, anti-Cameron newspapers, it is extremely interested in this disclosure of motives whose existence it has not heretofore suspected. There is not a single respectable authority, be it man or newspaper, which advocates absolute free trade in the United States to-day. What those who object to the plunder of the many for the benefit of the few demand, is a reduction of those duties which, whatever may be the argument for their original imposition, are now sufficient to cover three of four times over the difference between the cost of production here and abroad; and are, therefore, not protective but extortionate. Tariff reduction is something as different from free trade or a tariff for revenue only, as it is from prohibitory protection of the Cameron-Kelley stripe. But the attempt to drag this issue into the Pennsylvania contest, in the hope of frightening voters into the support of the machine, is a device so labored and ridiculous on the face of it as to show the desperate straits to which Cameronism has been reduced. Of the three parties now in the field—Cameronites, independent republicans and democrats—not one is open to the suspicion of a leaning toward free trade. The democratic platform carefully placed that party on a protective basis. There is not one of the independent leaders who favors anything like free trade, or even revenue reduction, so far as we know; while Mr. Wharton Barker, the very soul of the revolt, is one of the most consistent and advanced advocates of protection in the state or country. And in his enumeration of the ali-Cameron newspapers, the ex-senator singularly forgets to mention the New York Tribune, which is bitterly against him from beginning to end, and yet upholds extreme protection, if it has to call black white in doing so. The complete impudence of this charge, however, can be appreciated only by those who happen to remember an incident of the beginning of the campaign. When it first appeared that the opposition to the machine would be formidable, Don Cameron appealed to the leading manufacturers of Pennsylvania, and threatened that, if they did not rally to his support, he would attack protection in the United States senate, and throw his whole political influence against the continuance of the system. Surprised and alarmed at the indignation aroused by his ill-timed attempt at boycotting, he repented from his position, and allowed his father to explain away, as far as possible, the impolitic menace. And now he appears as the only apostle of the tariff idea. It is, perhaps, too much to expect that any one so thoroughly indoctrinated with the machine principles of politics as are the Camerons, should understand the motives which actuate free men everywhere in their desire to compass the downfall of the system of bosses and spoils. But in seeking to discover some discreditable object to be charged upon them before the people, the defeat of protection, in a local contest in the state of Pennsylvania, is the most absurd of all possible issues to evolve. It has long been understood that Don Cameron maintained his hold on the senate only by virtue of the senile confidence of the Quay-ened Simon. The general conviction of the country that the Camerons are a blight upon whatever they touch is therefore likely to fasten on the bosses of independent leaders a charge that has no meaning in the keystone state, unless directed against Senator Cameron himself.

For his treatment of the late President Garfield, Dr. Bliss asks $25,000, an allowance which, according to his own showing, is simply preposterous. He asserts that his receipts from his practice when called upon to attend the president were about $1500 per month. Grant the truth of this, suppose that his was wholly a cash practice, and that it was broken up for four months, although the president's illness lasted less than three. If the loss for that time was absolute it would amount to $6000. But himself cures his subscription fees of health and over exertion at Long Branch and again and add the extraordinary pecuniary advantage of access to the President on a vacation, of which Dr. Bliss is undoubtedly conscious, as might be expected of a man of his intelligence, and $25,000 is a reasonable estimate of the loss.

The Salt Lake Tribune [illegible] the [illegible] Utah and what [illegible] without national aid. A free call for [illegible] takes out a very few [illegible] and out-and-outers are [illegible] They may be classed as [illegible] Polygamy, against [illegible] of which the majority of the people are [illegible] A perverted civil administration which [illegible] men civil positions and power in spite of and following their [illegible] in Mormon ordered, and the complete [illegible] of the [illegible] by the church. The control of the school system by the Mormons [illegible] of classes [illegible] pay school taxes. Taxation without representation [illegible] form. The perversion of public [illegible] and corrupt jobberies, and the refusal to allow taxpayers to have access to the public records. 6. The corruption of juries by open and unpunished perjury and by disregard of the law. 7. Secret contracts for all public works. If only half of these allegations are true, it is evidently high time for the government to interfere.

The Sunday law plank adopted by the California republican convention reads as follows: "History and experience unite to prove the necessity of preserving one day in seven as a day of rest from labor. Without legislation on this subject the laboring classes might be compelled to continue in increasing toil, therefore we are in favor of observing Sunday as a day of rest and recreation, and while we expressly disavow the right or the wish to force any class of our citizens to spend that day in any particular manner, we do favor the maintenance of the present Sunday laws, or similar laws, providing for the suspension of all unnecessary business on that day."

---

There is eminent propriety in the proposition and practical movement to place a bust of the poet Longfellow among the memorials of England's illustrious dead that make Westminster abbey such hallowed ground to all who love that which is immortal in English literature. The land of Shakespeare and of Milton, of Jonson, Dryden and Wordsworth will have only a welcome for the suggestion to associate with them the name of one who has done as much as almost any of them to make English heartthrobs happier and English literature purer.

Mayor Chapman has vetoed the ordinance extending the fire limits to include ten additional blocks in the northern end of the city, and for very excellent reasons. If, as he is informed, the proposed extension would prohibit building on the soft ground of Couch's lake and render property there practically valueless, his veto is just. There should, however, be some discrimination in the matter, and the council committee would do well to remodel the ordinance, omitting the lake blocks.

---

An Eastern Oregon paper lauds Jeff. Mitchell as a generous man, and cites an instance in which he loaned or presented a young man with a check for $800. It would have been far more to his credit if he had sent the money to Mrs. Thomas' little children or the Balch heirs. We have no admiration for the generosity of robbers.

---

Last year the council ordered Market street macadamized, and now a sewer is to be run through it. Much of the expensive stone work put down only a few months ago will have to be removed in the operation of laying the pipes. The sewer should have gone in first. The cart should not go before the horse.

While a fire is raging is not a good time to test apparatus. The council committee on fire and water should test all the hose now in service and throw out all not able to stand the proper pressure.
